Mr. B. is sangume of the permanancy of their coal supply, which, with the grain supply-pork and cattle-the two railroads, and the prospect of further manufacturing the coming season, is the prescription that Seneca has taken which has thoroughly resurrected her from that lethargy which, several years ago was gnawing at her vitals, and the bloom on her rugged countenance to-day, speaks volumes for the remedy. The agricultural trade, too, is increasing with each year, G. A.
